W. P. WALTON.

Is a Candidate for Railroad Commissioner for the 2d District, subject to the will of the democracy.

DEMOCRATS need not bank on republican division as an assurance of success in the next campaign. Mr. Cleveland never said a truer thing than he did in a recent interview that the republicans may get badly mixed up with themselves at times, but they seem to have the faculty of pulling together at convenient times. This is the conclusion at which long observation of republican methods has brought the only surviving ex-president's mind. "The cohesive power of public plunder is stronger than all the animosities of dissatisfied republican factions and individuals." The bolters are always reconciled before reaching the vicinity of the ballot box. If the republican party is overthrown it will be because its policies are not approved by a majority of the people. It will not lose its power through disruption and a divided vote until the hostility of rival factions shall ripen into a degree of internecine hate far beyond that which at present exists. The democrats will gain a national victory when, as in 1884 and 1892, the voters of the country make up their minds that an absolute change of parties and policies is necessary for the general good and for the prosperity of ail classes. That result will not come through mere factional differences in the republican party, which are not taken to the poils.

OF course John Rhea was unseated. A republican Congress always sees too that when the claimant, no matter how poor a case he has, will vote with that party. McKenzie Moss came near being born an idiot and ought now really to be in a feeble minded institute, but he is a turncoat and ready to do his master's bidding. By the way, in speaking in his own behalf, Mr. Rhea got in a good one on Congressman Boreing, who spoke for seating Moss. Boreing scored Goebel for passing a law making a contest possible. Rhea said Boreing was both "partisan and ignorant. The election laws of Kentucky had always permitted contests, and if Goebel had never been born, a candidate could still have recourse to a contest and always had had such privilege." It is strange how stupid some republicans are who parade as wise nien. Even Deboe would have known better than to make such a break as Boreing. When Moss was sworn in the sergeant-at-arms of the House transferred to his account the sum of $5,550, being the amount due him for salary since March 4, 1901, and mileage between Bowling Green and Washington. This will be increased by $2,000 allowed contestants and contestees as attorney's fees. In round numbers Moss be came $7,500 richer by the action of the House .- Lex. Democrat.

IN MEMORIAM.

A gloom has overshadowed our town since Sunday morning March 2od, when the sad news of the death of Mr. W. H. a bird. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kennedy, was learned. He was sick only a few days, but his suffering during that time was intense and nothing that human hands could do could relieve him, and at 8:20 his soul wended its way back to Him who gave it. We believe that a presence greater than humanity was there and "on His breast he leaned and breathed his life out there."

He was a devoted son and brother and a true friend. His friends here and elsewhere were legion. He was converted and became a member of the Presbyterian church early in life and had since been a consistent member.

It is hard for us to understand now why a young soul so brave and true, an intellect so bright, could not have been spared longer to his loved ones here, but God knows best and we pray that His hand may guide the broken hearted family and that they may be com forted with the thought that his soul has found a heaven in God's eternal home. Still we know they mourn the loss of their son and brother, as do we of our faithful friend, but we do not weep without hope, for we expect to meet and know him again in the great

A young woman at Indianapolis was unable to determine which of three suitors she preferred, so she put the three names in a hat and drew out one and accepted the man whose name was on the slip. When a young woman's ardent affections are so evenly distributed among three young men, marriage does not necessarily change the condition and the unfortunate fellow who won should consider well before he enwon should consider well before he enters into an alliance which must necessarily prove an unhappy one,
